

Emerald Express Chair

The Emerald Express Chair is the main stomping grounds for lower-end intermediate skiers and boarders. It services a selection of classic groomed runs, a family zone, a terrain park and a half-pipe, all at an elevation that preserves snow quality. It's only downside is that it is often one of the most crowded lifts on both mountains.

The latest management plan at Whistler Mountain places Green Acres and Jolly Green Giant within the confines of the Habitat Terrain Park. Truly a sign of the times; the needs of the skiing public have shifted away from groomed runs toward that of created jumps and features. Skiers and boarders are still allowed to cruise Green Acres and Jolly Green Giant, but should be cognizant to the fact that the principal purpose of these runs revolves around the park.

7. Marmot

This run is really just a service road from the top of Emerald Express to the bottom of Harmony Express. It is not recommended for any other purpose. More photos on pages 62, 89, 91 & 95.

8. Sidwinder

Also known as Mindbender! This painfully flat run is an important thoroughfare allowing you to get over to the bottom of the Emerald Express (or lower) from the base of the Harmony Express. Additional photos on pages 62, 89 and 91.

9. Habitat Terrain Park

After the Big Easy Terrain Park on Blackcomb, this is the second most accommodating park for riders making a transition over to the dark side of freestyle! Have a slide through the park and check out all of the features. On your next run, tailor your choice of boxes, rails and table tops to suit your ability. Enjoy! Additional photos on pages 60 and 62.

10. Green Acres

This run is now part of the Habitat Terrain Park. Look around the sides of the park features for some fresh grooming or pockets of powder but watch out for those freestylers!

11. Coyote

An alternative ending to Green Acres. Would be really nice if it didn't have a flat road cutting across the middle of it! Additional photo on page 62.

12. Jolly Green Giant

A beautifully varied run within the Habitat Terrain Park. Steeper sections are broken up by flatter sections that give your legs a break! Additional photos on pages 60, 62 and 67 and 95.
